WEDNESDAY, NOV. 8, 1837.

THE HON F O J SMITH AND THE EASTERN ARGUS.

The Wednesday and Friday numbers of the Argus contain two long letters, from Mr Smith, apologetical and defensive, in relation to his vote against the Sub Treasury Bill, with the promise of a third on the same subject Strange that men who assume to themselves exclusively the name of "Democrats," and profess the highest regard for freedom of thought and action, and personal independence, should think it necessary to come out with a "Protest" or apology, whenever they chance to rise superior to party considerations, and act in obedience to their honest convictions of duty! But so it is Mr Smith is only one of many, who having been driven by the reckless course of the administration to oppose its measures, have not the manliness to defend their conduct on the ground that it is right, but seek to justify it on the ground that it is democratic and in accordance with party usages and opinions

Perhaps as this is a family quarrel between the two factions of Mr Van Buren's supporters, the Conservatives and Destructives, any remarks of ours may be regarded as intermeddling Still as political chroniclers of the times, we feel bound to give a brief space in our columns to a dispute, which bids fair to be as important in its results, as it is amusing in its progress Besides, the first letter from Mr Smith contains an avowal of principles, which, coming as it does from one, who in these disjointed times has filled no inconsiderable space in the public eye, demands at least a passing notice.

Mr. S commences with complaints, customary in such cases, of misrepresentations of his views and purposes, by members of the other faction, to whom, in the course of the letter, he applies epithets expressive of anything but fraternal regard; makes some unnecessary boastings of his servility to the last and present administrations, and of his subservience to the will of his constituents, claiming the right to think and act on his own responsibility, and to consult his own judgment, only, when his constituents are not by to think for him and, after indulging in a strain of eulogy upon the "magnanimity the elevation of character liberality of sentiment, and toleration of differences of political opinion" exhibited in Mr Van Buren's message, and giving an intimation of the way in which public opinion in favor of divorcing the Government from Banks, was manufactured at "Democratic Conventions," in obedience to an intimation that the 'Executive Branch of the Government" was in favor of it, he goes into an argument, which is continued through the second letter, to prove that the "Party" were fully committed in favor of the Pet Bank, and against the Sub-Treasury-System, in the last reign This point he very satisfactorily establishes by extracts from the editorials of the Globe Congressional speeches of the Jackson leaders, the Bentons and Wrights of the Senate, the Polks and Cambrelengs of the House; from Treasury and Committee Reports, and Presidential Messages. This has been done so frequently and so successfully by others, that this fresh exhibition of the inconsistency of the "Party," seems to us like striking a foe after he is down, an act of hostility always deemed unfair, except, perhaps, in family quarrels.

To this charge of having wheeled about, thus made against the Loco Focos, the Argus replies, that it is ridiculous for the few who have "polled off from the party," to accuse the many who remain of inconsistency That is, if we understand the argument, where two bodies of men are divided on a question, that comprising the larger number must be right. If ninety nine men pronounce snow to be white, and one hundred declare it black, why then it is clearly black. We advise the Argus to be cautious how it uses this [illegible] It may find it an unfortunate one It may find that others can use it as pointedly, that others, on this system of logic, can state premises as pregnant and draw conclusions as significant, as can that paper The Sub Treasury Bill, for instance! How does that stand when tested by the argument of numbers? Let the vote in the House answer. Or take the state of parties in the country the Locos are in favor of it, the Whigs and Conservatives, a great majority of the people are opposed to it.

But, as we said before, this is a family quarrel; and it may be a way they have, of settling questions of right and wrong that, by the test of numbers, and so we will not interfere And as to which of the factions has "jumped Jim Crow," it is no affair of ours. We can only say, that if either of them occupies the ground it did under the last administration, the sooner it abandons it the better As to the question, which is preferable, the Pet Bank, or the Sub-Treasury scheme an experiment which has failed, or an experiment which every man of intelligence knows must fail, we leave it to be decided by those whose pride of opinion and party interest prevent them from adopting a third system, which their own experience teaches them is infinitely better than either We are satisfied that the people understand the subject, and only await an opportunity of exercising their elective franchise to give a quietus to the whole race of experimenters.

[illegible] in the [illegible] letter of Mr [illegible] but an [illegible] and of [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] the grand Russian Review at [illegible]

The call for a meeting of the Merchants of New York was answered by an assemblage of thousands, at the New York Exchange on the evening of the third inst The most entire harmony was manifested throughout the proceedings of the Convention, and not a sentiment was advanced, which was not indicative of the most unqualified opposition to the present Administration, and its commerce-destroying measures

We present to our readers the address of this Convention to the People of the United States Notwithstanding its length, we publish the whole, for we believe it will repay an attentive perusal

Fellow Citizens of the United States.

For the last eight years doctrines have been industriously circulated in the public documents of the administration, and the columns of the administration press, designed to encourage the opinion that the pursuits of commerce are sordid and unworthy; that the Merchants as a body, are absorbed in the accumulation of wealth; leagued in intimate alliance with foreign Capitalists and Bankers, destitute of patriotic attachment, and separated in their sympathies and interests, from the great body of the American people

If these were merely hasty and ill-considered expressions, elicited in the ardor of partizan discussions, we should suffer them to pass unheeded and unrebuked But they have been embodied in official communications and through every channel of access infused into the public mind, till the merchants of New York deem it a duty to themselves, and their country, to repel the calumnies with which they have been assailed, and to make this appeal of Remonstrance and Protest to their fellow-citizens.

The political history of our country is, as it should be, familiar with all who place a value upon the institutions of which as a people we are justly proud, and in the preservation of which we have a mutual interest and to that record of the affairs of our country we with confidence appeal, to sustain us in the declaration, that the merchants of this city never attempted to exercise their legitimate influence in the political contests of the day, until they were compelled to do so in consequence of the late administration having commenced a crusade against all the great interests of the country, and by its measures sought to place all who were embarked in commerce without the pale of National Legislation It was not until the late Executive commenced a crusade against the currency of the country, upon the stability and permanent regulation of which, Commerce in all its various ramifications is so directly dependant, that the merchants of this city deemed it due to themselves and to the country at large, earnestly to remonstrate against the consequence of destroying a system, under which commerce, agriculture and manufactures, had flourished to an extent never before witnessed in the history of the world, and which was not only admired, but deemed worthy of imitation by the most enlightened European nations

The history of the past demonstrates, that whenever Agriculture has required the fostering aid of Government, those engaged in it, justly arguing that the object of Government is the equal protection of all the governed, have claimed its fostering care, or boldly and manfully remonstrated against measures calculated to injure or destroy it And so with our manufacturing interest when it has languished, or when those who had embarked their capital in the manufacture of our great staples of cotton and wool, deemed themselves neglected, they boldly remonstrated against such neglect, and openly appealed to the ballot-boxes for redress It was their right it was their duty so to do, and for thus acting, neither of these great interests have ever been denounced as enemies of the country or unworthy the protection of its laws, and yet when the merchants had quietly submitted to neglect, and made no complaints that commerce was not fostered as it should be, but only raised their voices and demanded to be heard when those who owed them protection sought to annihilate and destroy the right arm of national wealth and greatness, they were denounced as traitors to the country and hostile to its best interests

No argument on our part is necessary to satisfy the intelligent of all classes and occupations that between commerce, agriculture and manufactures, the connection is so intimate, and the dependance of each upon the other is so direct, that one cannot be injured, much less prostrated or destroyed, without including the other in its fate. The history of any civilized nation clearly demonstrates, that national greatness is the result of extended commerce, a flourishing agriculture, and prosperous manufactures; and we should deem ourselves wanting in common sagacity, if at any period of our prosperity, we had for a moment indulged the opinion that commerce could be successful while the other great interests of the country languished And yet, fellow citizens, because we have honestly discharged our duty to ourselves and the country at large because, when a crusade was urged against the currency and through it against commerce, we as a body did as you have done, and as the parties immediately interested, united in seeking redress at the Ballot Box, where you have so frequently and so successfully made yourselves heard we have been singled out for Executive denunciation, and as a class, declared unworthy of the rights, privileges and protection which the other great interests of the country enjoy

Against this condemnation and this proscription, we protest. WE solemnly protest against these attempts to represent us as a class with any interests adverse to the prosperity, the happiness, or the honor of our country. In contending for our own rights, we have never aimed to advance a policy in any way injuriously affecting the agricultural, manufacturing, or mechanic industry We have ever believed, and still believe that whatever affects injuriously these great interests, inflicts an equal injury upon us, and we are as well assured that whatever is calculated to injure us, reacts with an equal injury upon them

Who are the merchants of the United States? Who conduct and control our commerce, whiten with its canvass every sea, and challenge, for the Stars and Stripes of our Banner, the respect of the world? Are we not sons of Yeomanry, descendants of those who achieved the Independence which is our birthright, in the defence of which we have met those denunciations? Are we not bound by ties of blood, as well as of interest by the sympathies of kindred as well as by the connection of trade, with the farmers, the manufacturers, and the mechanics, and identified with them in our feelings as well as [illegible] Are we not bound by the [illegible] actuated by the same [illegible], oppressed or benefited by the same [illegible] entertaining the same devotion to our country and its institutions, [illegible] our rulers would [illegible] excite against [illegible] Is it not then gross injustice to assign us a place in the republic, separate from those with whom we are so intimately connected, and whose interests are thus identified with our own? We feel that it is, and we appeal to our past history in proof of it, and to your sense of justice for our vindication

As citizens entitled to express our opinion of the conduct of our rulers, and as individuals deeply interested in the commerce of our country, we shall continue to oppose all legislation that we may deem unwise or oppressive; and in this opposition we can never lose sight of the absolute identity of our own welfare, with the welfare of every class of our fellow citizens We have no separate interests, no separate aim and we call upon all good citizens to unite with us in redressing the great national abuses which have paralyzed the energies, and prostrated the industry of the people We are resolved and in this operation we earnestly invite the co-operation of our fellow citizens to use all lawful means to effect a change of rulers, and thereby restore to our currency its heretofore unrivalled uniformity and soundness, to commerce its accustomed activity, to agriculture its prosperity and to manufactures, and the mechanic arts their successful prosecution.

Fellow Citizens of New York The coming contest is one in which we have an equal stake, and upon the result of which are suspended the future destinies of our beloved country The administration, during the eight years of its rule, has destroyed the best currency with which any nation ever was blessed, it has suspended our manufactures, crippled our commerce, and brought distress and desolation upon a people that were once free, prosperous and happy

An administration has succeeded, pledged to the prosecution of the same policy, marking every step of its career with the same invasions of law, the same reckless disregard of consequence the same contempt of popular interests and popular will the same perversions of power to selfish and malevolent purposes and which have involved the country in its present disaster and disgrace

Such an administration can never enjoy our confidence, nor can the men who sustain it receive our support The country calls for a change of rulers The planters of the South the yeomanry of the West and of New England have spoken their condemnation, and we now appeal to our brethren throughout the State to unite in an effort to prostrate them in their last strong hold, and place the empire state in the position which its honor and its interest should command

Horrible Attempt to Massacre a Family About two years ago, a German, whose name we could not learn, married the daughter of a respectable citizen of this place, named Beck, who now resides in 43rd street, near the 8th Avenue, with whom he has lived ever since that time, and become the father of one child A short time ago it was communicated to Mr Beck, that his son-in law had a wife and several children living in Germany, whom he had abandoned at the time he came to this country This information having been given to his wife by her father, led to the demand of an explanation On Sunday morning last a noise being heard in the second story, one of Mr Beck's daughters went up to ascertain the cause, when she found the door bolted, and heard the groans of her sister within. The alarm was instantly given, when Mr Beck came up, and upon bursting open the chamber door, he discovered his daughter covered with blood, and her husband cutting at her with a large bowie knife, several wounds having been inflicted about the head and face The knife was immediately wrenched from the grasp of the murderous villain, and thrown out of the window, and his wife taken to the apartments of her father for protection. Shortly afterwards it was recollected that the infant of the injured woman was at the mercy of the savage parent, when they went up and found the inhuman demon beating it with his fists in the head and different parts of the body. He was immediately [illegible] and sent to prison, and a physician sent to dress the wounds of the sufferers, who gave it as his opinion that the child could not survive many hours. [illegible] to a horrible degree.

It is suggested that the wretch's intention was first to [illegible] his wife and child and afterwards to destroy himself. [N. Y. Express.

The Swabian Mercury quotes a letter from Rome, stating that the Papal Government had negociated with Messrs. de Rothschild, and Torlonia, a new loan, amounting to twenty millions of scudi and adding that the treasury was so completely exhausted that these bankers had been forced to advance 600,000 scudi before the terms of the loan were agreed upon.

Idleness Dr Blair says that idleness is the great corruption of youth, and the bane and dishonor of middle age He who, in the prime of life, finds time to hang heavy on his hands, may, with much reason, suspect that he has not consulted the duties which the consideration of his age imposed on him, assuredly he has not consulted his happiness.

Dreadful Attempt at Murder and Suicide in Woodbury, (Ct) On the afternoon of Tuesday last, says the New Haven Herald, an Irishman travelling with a bundle, came to the public house kept by Mr J P Marshall, in Woodbury, and made some inquiries about the road He left his bundle in the bar room, and went to the office of Charles B. Phelps, Esq to whom he said he had come to deliver himself, and went on to state a long incoherent account of abuses he had received at Zoar Bridge, and Merritt's Bridge, having been robbed of six dollars in money, a pair of boots, and being chased through a corn field Mr Phelps supposing him to be intoxicated, referred him to a Mr Judd, a Deputy Sheriff He went off but soon returned, divested himself of most of his clothing in the street, and again went into the office of Mr Phelps, from which he was ordered out About half past 6 he returned to Marshall's bar-room armed with a knife, where, without any quarrel or provocation, he assaulted a young man named Daniel Peck, inflicting three wounds in the breast and abdomen He also attacked Mr Marshall, giving him several dangerous wounds in the abdomen Mr M then gave an alarm, and fled into the sitting room where was Mrs Swift, the widow of Dr Swift of Bristol The assassin followed, and struck Mrs Swift with the knife through the right cheek to the tongue, and again in the breast which fortunately struck a steel busk and also lost its effect Mrs Preston, an aged lady, mother in law of Mr Marshall, hearing the alarm, came into the room, and was in turn assaulted, receiving a severe and dangerous wound in the abdomen, from which the intestines protruded. The assassin then retreated behind a door, where he cut his own throat, the knife passing near the carotid artery and the wind pipe Several persons had by this time assembled and attempted to seize him but he resisted powerfully till he was knocked down the cellar stairs, where he entrenched himself behind a door until a rope was thrown, by which he was noosed, brought to the floor and bound The scene presented a shocking sight Mrs Preston it is thought is wounded fatally; Mr Marshall dangerously, and Mrs Swift severely, but not dangerously. Mr Peck is wounded in the lungs, perhaps fatally. The assassin was weltering in blood, but the extent of his wounds was not ascertained at 11 o'clock on Tuesday night It is probable he is a maniac, escaped from confinement He said his name was John De Wise, or De Wire, and was going to Vermont He is a perfect model of muscular vigor, and has probably been a soldier

WHEN TO WOO

BY WILLIAM C BRYANT.

Dost thou idly ask to hear
At what gentle seasons
Nymphs relent, when lovers near
Press the tenderest reasons?
Ah! they give their faith too oft
To the careless wooer,
Maiden's hearts are always soft,
Would that men's were truer!

Woo the fair one when around
Early birds are singing,
When, o'er all the fragrant ground,
Early herbs are springing
When the brookside, bank and grove,
All with blossoms laden,
Shine with beauty, breathe of love
Woo the timid maiden.

Woo her when, with rosy blush,
Summer eve is sinking
When, on rills that softly gush,
Stars are softly winking,
When, through bows that knit the bower,
Moonlight gleams are stealing,
Woo her, till the gentle hour
Wakes a gentler feeling

Woo her when autumnal dyes
Tinge the woody mountain,
When the drooping foliage lies
In the half choaked fountain;
Let the scene, that tells how fast
Youth is passing over,
Warn her, ere her bloom is past,
To secure her lover

Woo her when the north winds call
At the lattice nightly,
When, within the cheerful hall,
Blaze the faggots brightly,
When the wintry tempests round
Sweeps the landscape hoary
Sweeter in her ear shall sound,
Love's delightful story
